abroad advisor. This can be done by reviewing our website, as well as attending a Study Abroad Information Session. The Center for Global Learning holds multiple sessions during the fall semester. Dates and topics will be announced in the Irvine and/or on our Facebook page.

2. Start an advising application. This will allow us to learn about your background and specific goals and needs ahead of time, and to give better advising. Completing the advising application and reviewing our resources helps you to think about these basic questions:

- Where do I want to go?
- What do I want to study?
- How long do I want to be gone?
- Which of these priorities are the most important to me?

Additionally, consider:

- What financial aid can I use?
- What scholarships are available?
- What deadlines do I have to meet?

3. Meet with your study abroad advisor to learn more about the program options that meet your specific goals. Programs vary by length, cost and available courses. You may visit during open office hours (see below), or schedule an appointment via email or with the Center for Global Learning front desk.

4. Meet with your academic advisor(s). This is a crucial part of your process (and also required)! Make an appointment to review a degree audit with your advisor to determine what classes you need to take on campus, and what classes are most appropriate to be taken abroad. The goal is to have some flexibility with the types of classes you need abroad, and will help you determine what classes you are looking for when you do your program research. It will also help you determine during which semester would be the best time to go abroad, so that you don't miss specific classes here on campus.

5. Select a program. Many students meet or email a study abroad advisor and/or academic advisor several times before making a final program selection. You can also gain valuable advice from other Agnes Scott students who have already studied abroad, your parents, and other loved ones. Ultimately, it is your decision what is best for you! However, it is helpful for others to be involved in the planning process.

6. Apply! There will be several different applications required. Visit our Deadlines webpage to check all office deadlines, but be aware that individual programs and scholarships have their own deadlines. Please keep in mind that some programs and scholarships are due a year or more in advance!

All students participating on independent (not faculty-led) programs will submit:

- Agnes Scott's Study Abroad Approval Form (this requires compiling course information and meeting with various department chairs, as well as your academic advisor)
- Program-specific application (for example - ISEP, DKU, ISA, etc. This often requires one or more faculty recommendations, so ask early!)
- You may be eligible to apply for scholarships from the Center for Global Learning, other ASC departments, your program provider, national study abroad scholarships, and other sources. Be sure to speak with your study abroad advisor about scholarship opportunities and deadlines. You can also visit
