Earning Credit

STUDY ABROAD COURSE APPROVALS

DU generally accepts all study abroad credits as elective credits, as long as the course aligns with a discipline taught at DU. If you need to earn major, minor, or common curriculum credits while abroad you need to complete the course approval process. A study abroad course approval is an agreement from the appropriate DU academic department to accept a course taken abroad as a substitute for a DU degree requirement. You will request all study course approvals through the Registrar's online system, the Transfer International Education Reporting (TIERS) system.

If a class does NOT align with a discipline taught at DU, credit will not be awarded. Examples include: Fashion Design, Architecture, Forestry, and Veterinary Science. When in doubt, students are encouraged to submit a course approval. Completion of abroad coursework which will not transfer back to the University of Denver may affect a student's federal financial aid eligibility.

STUDY ABROAD COURSE APPROVAL PROCESS:

Step 1: Check if the course is already on the pre-approved list for your program.

If a course is already on the list (must have exact course title and course number), you can expect it to be applied to your APR once your study abroad transcript is received by the Registrar's Office. For a more information on study abroad transcripts, click here.

If your desired course is not on the list OR is approved for a different DU course than you need, proceed to step two.

Step 2: Submit a study abroad course approval request.

You do not need a course approved if you wish it to count towards an elective.

Include as much information as you can about the course you wish to take abroad, including course description (required) and a syllabus (if available).

Explain what you wish to have the course approved for in the comments section (e.g., AI-Society or biology elective or SPAN 1001). Please take advantage of the students comment section of the request form. It is better to over-explain what you seek than having your request denied for lack of information.

You are limited to submitting five requests at one time. If you submit more than five at one time, they will not be reviewed.

Step 3: Check the status of your request.

Depending on the department and time of year, it could take four to five weeks to hear back about a course approval's status.

If it has been more than five weeks since you sent the original request, you should email the Registrar's Office for an update on the status.

The Global Grading & Credit Scale contains country- and program-specific information about how grades and credits are transferred back to DU. If, after consulting the guide, you still have questions about how your grades and credits from abroad will be calculated, please contact your OIE advisor.
